He has directed doctoral dissertations on colonial Latin American literature, early modern Spanish literature, and 20th-century Latin American literature.

Dr. Worden's main area of research is the work of Miguel de Cervantes, especially his novel Don Quixote. Dr. Worden has published in the fields of early modern Spanish literature, colonial Cuban theater, and 19th-century Spanish literature. He also has published on pedagogical topics, including how to teach Spanish at the middle school and high school levels and how to help undergraduate students make connections to Don Quixote. In addition, Dr. Worden is an award-winning speaker who has lectured on such subjects as the prose of Cervantes, early modern Spanish poetry, and approaches for helping beginning language students become comfortable speaking Spanish.

For a number of years, Dr. Worden served The University of Alabama's Department of Modern Languages and Classics as the Director of the Spanish Language Program and was responsible for supervising all graduate teaching assistants and instructors of introductory- and intermediate-level Spanish courses. In 2013, the Alabama Association of Foreign Language Teachers selected Dr. Worden as the winner of the annual Outstanding Foreign Language Teacher Award for Postsecondary. ■

Dr. Laura Rojas-Arce, author of the workbook and coauthor of the speaking activities, grew up in Costa Rica, where she studied psychology as an undergraduate student at the Universidad Hispanoamericana in Heredia. She completed her doctoral studies with a focus on contemporary Central American literature and received her Ph.D. from The University of Alabama in 2013. Dr. Rojas-Arce is an Instructor of Spanish at The University of Alabama, where she teaches courses ranging from Introductory Spanish and Advanced Grammar and Composition to courses on Latin American literature. ■

Workbook Introduction

Welcome to the workbook for Learning Spanish: How to Understand and Speak a New Language. The exercises included here are designed to help develop your reading and writing skills in Spanish while you practice the vocabulary and grammar presented in the lessons. This introduction briefly explains how this workbook fits in with the other components that accompany this course so that you'll know how best to make use of all of them to help develop your Spanish skills.

When you finish watching one of the 30 lessons, you should next listen to the audio glossary, which will give you the pronunciation and definition of all the new vocabulary words. Then, it will be time to practice what you've learned. The speaking activities that follow the audio glossary are designed to help you improve your listening and speaking skills, and the exercises in this workbook will allow you to practice your reading and writing skills. You can decide if you want to do the speaking activities before or after you do the workbook exercises, but you should do both of these only after watching the lesson and listening to the audio glossary. In addition to the exercises accompanying each lesson, you will find the Grammar Reference, Glossary by Topic, Glossary of Cognates, Spanish-English Glossary, English-Spanish Glossary, and Resources for Further Study at the end of the workbook.

Each section of this workbook begins with New Vocabulary, a listing of new words in the same order as they are presented in the audio glossary. Next, the General Review section summarizes the material covered in the lesson, allowing you to review grammatical, cultural, or vocabulary-related content. Then, you will find the Activities, which offer practice with the new grammar and vocabulary. At the end of every workbook section, you will find the Correct Answers, which will allow you to check your work. In addition to the Activities included after every lesson, this workbook also contains six Cultural Readings about different aspects of Latin American culture.

The Activities in this workbook are contextualized in a series of short stories dealing with several families and their friends and neighbors. These families live in Villa Celeste [Celestial Town], a neighborhood somewhere in Latin America. The principal characters in the stories are the Cortés Ruiz family, the Quirós García family, and the González Fallas family. The Cortés Ruiz family has three sons, and the Quirós García family has two daughters and a son. Those two families also have two very young granddaughters. The González Fallas family, who just recently moved to the neighborhood, has a son and a daughter. You will find the family trees for these families following this introduction.

Most of the words used in the Activities will be ones you will have already been introduced to in the course. When this is not the case, the workbook will give the English for the Spanish word. The six Cultural Readings do indeed include vocabulary and grammar you will have already seen in the course. But they also purposely include some material a bit beyond your current level of comprehension. This will force you to make some educated guesses while reading—a very useful skill for a language learner. You won't need to recognize every word or expression in a reading to gain a good understanding of it. The English translation for the Cultural Readings can be found after the Correct Answers, so you will be able to see how well you understood what you read.

And now, it's time to get to work. Or, as we would say in Spanish: ¡A trabajar! [Let's work!]. ■

II. Repaso general / General Review

A. Demonstrative Adjectives

English has two demonstrative adjectives: “this” and “that.” “This” is used to talk about something near the speaker, while “that” is used to talk about something farther away. As for plurals, the plural of “this” is “these,” and the plural of “that” is “those.” Spanish has three demonstrative adjectives: este [this] is used to talk about something near the speaker and is often used with the adverb aquí [here]; ese [that] is used to talk about something farther away and is often used with the adverb allí [there]; and aquel [that over there] is used to talk about something even farther away and is often used with the adverb allá [over there].

Each of these demonstrative adjectives has four forms: masculine singular, feminine singular, masculine plural, and feminine plural. These forms are as follows: este [this], esta [this], estos [these], estas [these]; ese [that], esa [that], esos [those], esas [those]; aquel [that over there], aquella [that over there], aquellos [those over there], aquellas [those over there]. Demonstrative adjectives, unlike most adjectives in Spanish, go before the modified noun (e.g., estas cartas [these menus]; esos guisantes [those peas]; aquel aperitivo [that appetizer over there]).

B. Demonstrative Pronouns

All of the demonstrative adjectives, which clearly are used to modify nouns, can also be used as demonstrative pronouns, meaning that they can replace nouns as well (e.g., De los dos pasteles, ¿prefieres este o ese? is “Of the two cakes, do you prefer this one or that one?”). There are also three neuter demonstrative pronouns that are not demonstrative adjectives: esto [this], eso [that], and aquello [that]. These three pronouns, which cannot be used as adjectives, are used to talk not about some specific object but, rather, about a situation in general or some idea that has already been mentioned. For example, ¿Qué es esto? is “What is this?,” a question often used by someone who comes upon some odd situation he or she doesn’t understand.

C. Affirmative and Negative Expressions

It can be helpful to learn affirmative and negative expressions together so that you’re learning a word and its opposite (e.g., algo [something] and nada [nothing]; alguien [someone] and nadie [no one]; siempre [always] or a veces [at times] and nunca [never]; también [also] and tampoco [neither]; o...o [either...or] and ni...ni [neither...nor]). También is used if you agree with something affirmative someone has said, while tampoco is used if you agree with something negative someone has said (e.g., Siempre visito este museo. Yo también is “I always visit this museum.” “Me too”; No cocinamos mucho. Nosotros tampoco is “We don’t cook much.” “We don’t either”).

Double negatives are grammatically acceptable in Spanish. In fact, it’s very common to put no before the verb and another negative word after the verb (e.g., No viajan nunca is “They never travel”; No estudia nadie is “No one studies”; No veo a nadie is “I don’t see anyone”). Besides putting no before the verb and a different negative word after it, you can also simply put the negative word before the verb (e.g., Nunca viajan; Nadie estudia; A nadie veo).

D. Variations in Grammar and Vocabulary in Spanish

You have already learned that the subject pronouns vosotros and vosotras (the informal, plural forms of tú) are used only in Spain. Another regional difference in subject pronoun use deals with the use, or lack of use, of the subject pronoun tú. In certain areas of the Spanish-speaking world—in many parts of Argentina, Uruguay, and Paraguay and in a number of Central American countries—speakers use the subject pronoun vos instead of tú. Someone speaking informally to you using vos would not ask ¿De dónde eres tú? to say “Where are you from?”; instead, the speaker would ask ¿De dónde sos vos? (Sos is the form of the verb ser that is used with vos). So, if you interact with a Spanish speaker using vos, just know that it’s a second-person singular subject pronoun.

As for vocabulary, it’s not surprising that different words are used in different regions. For example, “a bowl” in Spanish could be un bol, un cuenco, un tazón, un plato, or un plato hondo, depending on the country. If you talk to someone who uses a different word than you do (e.g., zumo instead of jugo for “juice” or camarera instead of mesera for “waitress”), use the encounter as an opportunity to expand your vocabulary.

E. Varieties of Accents in Spoken Spanish

Spanish speakers in different regions of the world pronounce words in the language in different ways. You have learned that in northern and central Spain, a speaker would pronounce the z in zapato with a th sound, rather than the s sound common in Latin America. Many speakers in el cono sur [the southern cone] region that includes Chile, Argentina, and Uruguay pronounce both the y and ll as a sh sound. And it is common in Spanish-speaking regions of the Caribbean for speakers to drop the sounds associated with s and d, such that ¿Cómo están ustedes? might sound more like ¿Cómo etá utee?

There are two very interesting and useful academic websites that can help you become familiar with different varieties of spoken Spanish. One website, maintained by The Ohio State University, is called the Digital Catalog of the Sounds of Spanish. If you go to this website, you'll be able to watch short videos of Spanish speakers from Spain, almost all the Spanish-speaking countries in Latin America, and even the United States. Most of the videos you'll find also include a transcript of the Spanish being spoken by the person in the video. So, as you're listening to the words being spoken, you can, if you want, read the words as well. Another academic website is called Spanish Proficiency Exercises, and you can find it at the University of Texas at Austin website. This website also includes video clips of a variety of Spanish speakers in different countries talking about a wide range of topics. And very often you can read the text of what the person is saying as you listen to the Spanish.

Interacting with these two websites will help you get a sense of different ways that Spanish is spoken in different countries. It will allow you to compare a Mexican accent with one from Chile and a Guatemalan accent with one from Spain. Traveling to Spanish-speaking countries is another great way to become accustomed to the variety of ways Spanish is pronounced in different regions of the world.

II. Repaso general / General Review

A. Useful Expressions

In Spanish, the expression ¡A + infinitive! means “Let’s + verb!” (e.g., ¡A comer! is “Let’s eat!”; ¡A viajar! is “Let’s travel!”). Both de nuevo and otra vez mean again (e.g., Vamos a estudiar las nuevas palabras otra vez is “We’re going to study the new words again”).

B. Affirmative and Negative Expressions

The affirmative adjective alguno means “some” or “any,” and its opposite is ninguno, meaning “none” or “not any.” The four forms of the affirmative adjective are alguno, alguna, algunos, and algunas; the forms of the negative adjective are ninguno, ninguna, ningunos, and ningunas (although the plural forms of ninguno are rarely used). In general, these affirmative and negative adjectives are used to talk about whether there are or are not any of a certain thing (e.g., ¿Tenéis algunos de vuestros suéteres? is “Do you have some of your sweaters?”; No vamos a tomar ninguna clase is “We’re not going to take any classes”). Both alguno and ninguno drop the -o before masculine singular nouns, forming the adjectives algún and ningún (e.g., Pili siempre lee algún libro is “Pili is always reading some book”; Las doctoras no tienen ningún problema is “The doctors don’t have any problems”).

All of the above affirmative and negative adjectives can also function as pronouns (e.g., De las clases del verano, siempre hay algunas muy buenas is “Of the summer classes, there are always some very good ones”; No veo a ninguno de los trabajadores is “I don’t see any of the workers”).

C. Pronouncing Strong and Weak Vowels

Vowels in Spanish are divided between strong vowels and weak vowels. The strong vowels are a, e, and o, while the weak vowels are i and u. When pronounced, each strong vowel makes a sound that counts as its own syllable. So, for example, when two strong vowels are next to each other, each counts as its own syllable (e.g., feo is a two-syllable word [fe / o]; canoa is a three-syllable word [ca / no / a]).

A diphthong is the combination of two vowels that together make up just one syllable. A diphthong is formed when a strong vowel is next to a weak vowel (e.g., cuando is a two-syllable word [cuan / do] because ua counts as just one syllable) or when two weak vowels are next to each other (e.g., Luis is a one-syllable word). A triphthong is the combination of two weak vowels with one strong vowel (e.g., Paraguay contains a triphthong, with the y pronounced the same as the vowel i).

When a diphthong has a weak vowel with an accent mark, it’s no longer a diphthong pronounced as just one syllable. Instead, the vowel combination is pronounced as two syllables (e.g., cafetería has a total of five syllables [ca / fe / te / rí / a] because the accent over the i makes that letter its own syllable; farmacia only has three syllables [far / ma / cia] because the ia diphthong counts as just one syllable).

D. The Letters ü and ç

You have learned that the letter combinations ge and gi are pronounced in a way that sounds like je and ji (e.g., Argentina and Gerardo). However, when ü follows the letter g, the gü is pronounced as you would pronounce the letter combination gw (e.g., bilingüe is “bilingual”; el pingüino is “the penguin”). You pronounce letter ç as you would pronounce an s. So, for example, the shortened form of the name of the soccer team from Barcelona is Barça, pronounced barsa.

II. Repaso general / General Review

A. Indirect Object Pronouns

With relation to the verb, the indirect object answers the questions “to whom?” or “for whom?”. Consider the sentence “She gives him the wallet.” In that sentence, the direct object, answering the question “What does she give?,” is “the wallet.” The indirect object, answering the question “to whom?” or “for whom?”, is “to him,” which is the indirect object. English also permits dropping the preposition “to,” resulting in the sentence “She gives him the wallet.” And in this sentence, “him” is still the indirect object.

Like direct object pronouns, indirect object pronouns always go before a conjugated verb (e.g., Ella le da la cartera is “She gives him the wallet”; Nos hacen muchas preguntas is “They ask us many questions”). If there’s a no in the sentence, the no goes before the indirect object pronoun (e.g., No les decimos la verdad is “We don’t tell them the truth”). The six indirect object pronouns are as follows.

me	nos
te	os
le	les

When the indirect object is a specific person or people in the third person, the le or les must still be included in the sentence (e.g., Le doy los platos al mesero is “I give the plates to the waiter”). The pronoun os (meaning a vosotros or a vosotras) is only used in Spain.

B. Indirect Object Pronouns Used with Nonconjugated Verbs

In the case of a nonconjugated verb (e.g., an infinitive or a present participle), indirect object pronouns, like direct object pronouns, can go either before the conjugated verb or after and attached to the infinitive or the present participle (e.g., Te vamos a dar el impermeable and Vamos a darte el impermeable both mean “We’re going to give you the raincoat”; Nos están enseñando los verbos and Están enseñándonos los verbos both mean “They are teaching us the verbs”). When adding indirect object pronouns to either infinitives or present participles, you might need to add an accent to maintain the original stress (as in enseñándonos, which maintains the stress on the syllable ñan, which is where the word is stressed in Nos están enseñando los verbos).

C. Verbs like gustar

Verbs that use indirect object pronouns include gustar [to be pleasing], encantar [to be very pleasing], interesar [to interest], and molestar [to bother]. Me gusta el libro means “The book is pleasing to me” and can also be translated as “I like the book.” The subject of that sentence is el libro. With verbs like gustar, the singular form of the verb is used when it is followed by a singular subject or by a verb (e.g., Nos encanta la música is “We love the music”; ¿Os interesa estudiar? is “Are you interested in studying?”). The plural form of a verb like gustar is used when it is followed by a plural subject (e.g., No me molestan los exámenes is “The exams don’t bother me”).

D. Ways to Learn New Vocabulary

The single best way to learn new words is to use them, because once you use them, they start becoming yours. One way to use the vocabulary you’re being exposed to is to interact with the audio glossary, speaking activities, and workbook that are part of this course. If you’re using flashcards, you might start to define new words using Spanish words you already know (e.g., you might define caro [expensive] as cuesta mucho [it costs a lot]). Reading a lot is the best way to come into contact with new words. As has been discussed previously, you don’t need to understand every word you read to benefit from the activity of reading.

Three other ideas that will help you learn new words are as follows: Don’t overuse words you’ve already acquired; establish a personal connection to words; and involve your senses when learning vocabulary. If you’re always using the same words (it’s common for beginning language learners to overuse, for example, bueno and malo), you’ll be communicating in a limited way and preventing yourself from using new vocabulary. So, approach each Vocabulario nuevo [New Vocabulary] section of the workbook with the intent of finding ways to use those new words when speaking or writing. If you describe yourself with certain words, you’ll probably be using vocabulary that you’ll retain. Work to make personal connections to words so that they’ll be easier for you to remember. Finally, involve your senses in the learning experience. If you’re reading Spanish, don’t just read silently. Read aloud at times, to get your hearing in play and to feel what your mouth does as it’s pronouncing new words. All of this will help you more easily remember and use new vocabulary.

II. Repaso general / General Review

A. Ordinal Numbers

Unlike most adjectives, ordinal numbers—such as primero [first], segundo [second], tercero [third], etc....—precede the noun they modify (e.g., La casa de los Sánchez es la cuarta casa is “The Sánchez’s house is the fourth house”). As is the case with the adjectives bueno [good], malo [bad], ninguno [none, not any], and alguno [any, one] (which you have already learned about), the ordinal numbers primero and tercero drop the -o before masculine singular nouns (e.g., el primer dormitorio is “the first bedroom”; el tercer pasillo is “the third hall”).

B. Double Object Pronouns

You have learned that the indirect object pronouns are me, te, le, nos, os, and les and that the direct object pronouns are me, te, lo, la, nos, os, los, and las. When an indirect object pronoun and a direct object pronoun are used together in a sentence (called a double object pronoun), the indirect object pronoun always precedes the direct object pronoun. As is the case when either a direct or an indirect object pronoun is used alone, if the sentence has only a conjugated verb, the double object pronoun must go before the verb. And in sentences with a conjugated verb and an infinitive or a present participle, the double object pronoun can go either before the conjugated verb or after and attached to the infinitive or present participle.

Examples of double object pronouns include the following: “They give it (el dinero) to us” is Nos lo dan; “Raquel says it (la verdad) to me” is Raquel me la dice; “I read them (los libros) to you [singular, informal]” is Te los leo; We’re going to give them (las pizzas) to you [plural, informal]” is Os las vamos a dar or Vamos a dároselas.

When the indirect object pronoun le or les precedes the direct object pronoun lo, la, los, or las, the le or les becomes se. Examples of double object pronouns showing this change include the following: “I give them (los papeles) to her” is Se los doy; “We tell it (el problema) to them” is Se lo decimos; “You [Tú] write it (el libro) for them” is Se lo escribes; “She is explaining it (la situación) to him right now” is Se la está explicando ahora mismo or Está explicándosela ahora mismo.

Because se in a double object pronoun can mean to him, to her, to usted, to them, or to ustedes, it is common to state specifically to whom or for whom something is done (e.g., Se lo digo a Juan is “I’m telling it to Juan”; Vas a decírselo a Sara y a Laura is “You are going to say it to Sara and Laura”).

C. Uses of pensar

Pensar [to think] can be used to offer an opinion (e.g., Pienso que el examen es difícil is “I think that the exam is difficult”), but quite often Spanish speakers prefer to use creer [to think, to believe] to offer an opinion (e.g., Creo que el examen es difícil).

Pensar en means “to think about something” (e.g., Pienso mucho en mi familia is “I think a lot about my family”). Pensar de is used “to ask for an opinion of something” (e.g., ¿Qué piensas de la profesora? is “What do you think about the professor?”). Pensar + infinitive means “to plan to do something” (e.g., Pensamos comer después de las ocho is “We are planning to eat after eight o’clock”).

D. Another Use of se

In this lesson, you have seen se used in double object pronouns. Se is also used in expressions like Se habla inglés aquí, which is “English is spoken here.” At times, se carries the idea of what in English would be expressed by “one,” “you,” or “they” (e.g., Se vive bien en México is “One lives well in Mexico” or “You live well in Mexico”; Se dice que el garaje es enorme is “They say that the garage is enormous”).

Verbs used with se in contexts like these are conjugated in the third person (e.g., Se oyen francés e italiano en la clase is “French and Italian are heard in the class”).

Lee la lectura siguiente sobre la industria textil y contesta las preguntas de forma cierto ("C") o falso ("F"). / Read the following text about the textile industry and answer the questions as either true ("C") or false ("F").

La industria textil

Los constantes cambios en la economía global han hecho que los países busquen distintos medios para mejorar sus propias economías y mantenerse en el mercado financiero global. Es común que se piense en América Latina como una economía con base en la agricultura. Sin embargo, otra de las industrias muy importantes para la región en cuanto a exportaciones es la industria textil. Las compañías dedicadas a estas actividades confeccionan todo tipo de ropa y algunas veces también zapatos.

Colombia, Panamá, Honduras, El Salvador y Perú son algunos de los países con altos niveles de exportación, en especial hacia los Estados Unidos. No solamente los diseños sino también la alta calidad de las prendas de vestir han hecho que muchas compañías extranjeras inviertan y se interesen en la producción textil que se realiza en estos países. En el pasado, se asociaban las maquiladoras con empleados del género femenino. Hoy en día en las maquiladoras, hay tantos empleados masculinos como femeninos.

Otro tipo de ropa que es característico de la cultura en América Latina es la elaborada por mujeres indígenas. Estas prendas tienen muchos colores y diferentes diseños que representan la cultura indígena. Muchas de estas mujeres y sus familias han encontrado en la confección y venta de su ropa una manera de mejorar su situación económica. En la región de Altos de Chiapas, en México, varias mujeres indígenas se han organizado para vender su ropa. Aunque mantienen la tradición del bordado multicolor a mano, ellas han empezado a utilizar la máquina de coser también. Este grupo tiene ahora un nombre para su ropa: Taj Kotoltik, que significa "Entre Todas," y tienen una exhibición de las prendas que confeccionan en el Museo de la Ciudad de México. Dentro de las innovaciones para la comercialización de sus productos, ahora tienen su propio sitio web en Internet: tajkotoltik.com.mx.

3. Hoy en día, hay hombres y mujeres que trabajan en las maquiladoras. _____

The Textile Industry

The constant changes in the global economy have resulted in countries looking for different ways to improve their own economies and maintain themselves in the global financial market. It's common to think of Latin America as an economy based in agriculture. Nevertheless, another of the very important industries for the region in terms of exports is the textile industry. The companies dedicated to these activities make all sorts of clothing and sometimes shoes as well.

Colombia, Panamá, Honduras, El Salvador, and Perú are some of the countries with high levels of exportation, especially to the United States. Not only the designs but also the high quality of the garments have made many foreign countries invest and become interested in the textile production that is done in these countries. In the past, the textile factories were associated with women. Nowadays in the textile factories, there are as many male as female workers.

Another kind of clothing that is characteristic of Latin American culture is the clothing made by indigenous women. These garments have many colors and different designs that represent the indigenous culture. Many of these women and their families have found in the making and selling of their clothing a way to improve their economic situation. In the region of Altos de Chiapas, in Mexico, various indigenous women have organized themselves to sell their clothing. Although they maintain the tradition of multicolored hand embroidery, they have begun to use the sewing machine as well. This group now has a name for its clothing: Taj Kotoltik, which means "Among All the Women," and they have a display of the garments that they make in the Museum of the City of Mexico. Among their innovations for the commercialization of their products, they now have their own website on the Internet: tajkotoltik.com.mx.

Grammar Reference

Articles

		Definite Articles		Indefinite Articles
		masc.	fem.	masc.	fem.
sing.		el	la	sing. un	una
pl.		los	las	pl. unos	unas

The two contractions in Spanish are as follows.

a + el = al de + el = del

Feminine nouns beginning with the sound a in a stressed syllable use el rather than la as their definite article and un rather than una as their indefinite article (e.g., el águila rápida, un águila rápida).

Nouns

Words ending in -o are usually masculine; words ending in the letters -r and -l are also usually masculine (e.g., el maestro, el televisor, el papel). Words ending in -a are usually feminine; words ending in the suffixes -ión, -ad, and -tud are also almost always feminine (e.g., la mesa, la nación, la posibilidad, la virtud). Words ending in -ista can be either masculine or feminine (e.g., el dentista, la dentista).

The rules for making a noun plural are as follows.

1. If a noun ends in a vowel, add an -s: la silla → las sillas.
2. If a noun ends in a consonant other than z, add -es: el papel → los papeles.
3. If a noun ends in a z, change the z to c and add -es: el lápiz → los lápices.

Adjectives

Adjectives must agree in number and gender with the noun modified. Adjectives ending in -o and -dor and adjectives of nationality ending in a consonant have four forms.

		masc.	fem.	masc.	fem.	masc.	fem.
sing.		guapo	guapa	hablador	habladora	inglés	inglesa
pl.		guapos	guapas	habladores	habladoras	ingleses	inglesas

Almost all other adjective have two forms.

		masc. & fem.	masc. & fem.
sing.		elegante	fenomenal
pl.		elegantes	fenomenales

Adjectives in Spanish typically follow the noun modified (e.g., Queremos ver la casa grande y los parques bonitos).

Possessive Adjectives

mi / mis	nuestro / nuestra / nuestros / nuestras
tu / tus	vuestro / vuestra / vuestros / vuestras
su / sus	su / sus

Possessive adjectives precede the modified noun (e.g., Tengo mis libros y ella tiene sus papeles).

Demonstrative Adjectives

	masc.	fem.	masc.	fem.	masc.	fem.
sing.	este	esta	ese	esa	aquel	aquella
pl.	estos	estas	esos	esas	aquellos	aquellas

Demonstrative adjectives precede the modified noun (e.g., Me gusta esta computadora aquí).

Demonstrative adjectives, which modify a noun, can also be used as demonstrative pronouns, which take the place of a noun (e.g., ¿Cuál de los restaurantes prefieres, ese o aquel?).

Adverbs

One way to form an adverb is to add the suffix -mente to the feminine singular form of an adjective (e.g., activa + mente → activamente; general + mente → generalmente). A common way to make an adverbial expression is to use the preposition con before a noun (e.g., con frecuencia, con cuidado).

Reflexive Pronouns				Direct Object Pronouns

Direct object pronouns, indirect object pronouns, and reflexive pronouns go either before a conjugated verb or after and attached to an infinitive or a present participle. Examples include the following.

Lo vamos a hacer mañana or Vamos a hacerlo mañana.

Les quiero dar todo el dinero or Quiero darles todo el dinero.

Me estoy poniendo los zapatos or Estoy poniéndome los zapatos.

The indirect object pronoun always precedes the direct object pronoun when both are used in the same sentence (e.g., Si tengo los papeles, te los puedo mostrar).

Both le and les become se before lo, la, los, and las (e.g., Cuando los estudiantes quieren más tiempo, sus maestros siempre se lo dan).

Verbs

Present Tense of Regular Verbs

Once you learn the regular -ar endings in the present tense, you can learn the -er and -ir endings by knowing the following.

1. The -er endings have just one difference from the -ar endings: Change a → e for every -ar ending, and that gives you the -er endings.
2. There are only two differences between the -er endings and the -ir endings: emos → imos and éis → ís.

The following verbs have irregular yo forms in the present tense: saber (yo sé); conocer (yo conozco); hacer (yo hago); poner (yo pongo); traer (yo traigo); salir (yo salgo); verbs ending in -ger, such as proteger (yo protejo); and verbs ending in -cer or -cir, such as ofrecer (yo ofrezco) and conducir (yo conduzco).

Present Tense of Stem-Changing Verbs

Verbs that change stem:

1. Have one of four stem changes: e → ie, e → i, o → ue, u → ue.
2. Have regular endings.
3. Change stem in all singular forms and in the third-person plural (in the boot).

querer		pedir		recordar		jugar
quiero	queremos	pido	pedimos	recuerdo	recordamos	juego	jugamos
quieres	queréis	pides	pedís	recuerdas	recordáis	juegas	jugáis
quiere	quieren	pide	piden	recuerda	recuerdan	juega	juegan

Talking about Something Happening Right Now

The present progressive, used to talk about something happening right now, is formed as follows: estar in the present + present participle. To form the present participle, do the following: For an -ar verb, drop the -ar ending and add -ando; for an -er or -ir verb, drop the -er or -ir ending and add -iendo (e.g., bailar → bailando; aprender → aprendiendo; abrir → abriendo).

Verbs ending in -er or -ir that have stems ending in a vowel have irregular present participles. Instead of ending in -iendo, the participle for these verbs ends in -yendo with a y (e.g., leer → leyendo; oír → oyendo; traer → trayendo).

An example of the present progressive being used is Estamos comiendo ahora.

Talking about the Future

Two ways to talk about the future are as follows.

1. Use the present tense (e.g., Mañana te doy la computadora).
2. Use the construction ir + a + infinitive (e.g., Esta noche vamos a trabajar mucho).

Talking about the Recent Past

Acabar in the present + de + infinitive is used to express a recent past event (e.g., La profesora acaba de explicar la lección).

Expressing How Long Something Has Been Going On

A construction that expresses how long something has been going on is hace + time period + que + present tense of verb (e.g., Hace cuatro meses que estudiamos español).

Another way to express how long something has been going on is with the question ¿Desde cuándo + subject + present tense of verb? (e.g., ¿Desde cuándo trabajas aquí?).

There are three ways that a question like this could be answered. One way is with the construction Desde que + subject + present tense of verb (e.g., Desde que trabajo en la universidad). A second way to answer the question is with the construction Desde + specific point in time (e.g., Desde el mes pasado). A third way to answer the question is with the construction Desde hace + time period (e.g., Desde hace tres años).

Usted and ustedes Commands

To form an usted command:

1. Drop the -o ending from the yo form of the verb in the present tense.
2. For -ar verbs, add an e, and for -er and -ir verbs, add an a.

Examples of usted commands include the following: caminar → camine; aprender → aprenda; abrir → abra.

Stem-changing verbs follow this same rule to form the usted command (e.g., pensar → piense; dormir → duerma; servir → sirva). Many verbs that are irregular in the present tense have regular usted command forms, meaning that they follow the same rules as other verbs (e.g., conocer → conozca; oír → oiga; venir → venga).

Verbs ending in -car, -gar, and -zar have the following spelling changes in the usted command form: For verbs ending in -car, the change is c → qu; for verbs ending in -gar, the change is g → gu; for verbs ending in -zar, the change is z → c (e.g., tocar → toque; buscar → busque; pagar → pague).

The irregular usted command forms are as follows: dar → dé; estar → esté; ser → sea; saber → sepa; ir → vaya.

Putting a no before an usted command makes it negative (e.g., No coma). Adding an -n to the usted command makes it an ustedes command (e.g., Amigos, vengan a nuestra casa). A no and an -n at the end of the command results in a negative ustedes command (e.g., Por favor, chicos, no vayan ahora).

Affirmative tú Commands

The affirmative tú command is the third-person singular form of the verb in the present tense (e.g., estudiar → estudia; comer → come; abrir → abre; jugar → juega; servir → sirve; oír → oye).

There are eight irregular tú commands: venir → ven; salir → sal; poner → pon; tener → ten; hacer → haz; ser → sé; decir → di; ir → ve.

Negative tú Commands

The negative tú command is formed in the following way: no + usted command + -s (e.g., trabajar → no trabajes; tener → no tengas; vivir → no vivas; ser → no seas; hacer → no hagas).

Affirmative vosotros Commands

To make a vosotros command, drop the -r of the infinitive and replace it with a -d (e.g., hablar → hablad; tener → tened; dormir → dormid). The vosotros command is only used in Spain; a Latin American would use an ustedes command rather than a vosotros command.

Using Pronouns with Commands

Three types of pronouns can be used with commands: direct object pronouns, indirect object pronouns, and reflexive pronouns. These pronouns go after affirmative commands and before negative commands, as shown below. Notice that the first three commands below are tú commands, and the final three commands are usted commands.

	Infinitive	Pronoun(s)	Affirmative Command	Negative Command
tú commands	dar	me + lo	dámelo	no me lo des despertarse	se	despiértate	no te despiertes
	hacer	lo	hazlo	no lo hagas
usted commands	acostarse	se	acuéstese	no se acueste
	comer	las	cómalas	no las coma
	escribir	le + la	escribasela	no se la escriba

Preterite Tense

Once you learn the regular -ar endings in the preterite tense, you can learn the -er/-ir endings and the endings for verbs like tener by knowing the following.

1. The endings for -er and -ir verbs are the same, and they all start with the letter i. In fact, the -er and -ir endings for four subjects (yo, tú, nosotros, vosotros) can be formed by changing the first letter of the -ar ending to i (e.g., é → í; aste → iste; amos → imos; asteis → isteis).
2. The differences in endings between -ar and -er/-ir verbs are as follows for the usted and ustedes forms: ó → ió; aron → ieron.
3. The preterite endings for verbs like tener are the -ar endings without the accent for the yo and usted forms (e.g., -e of tuve; -o of tuvo). The other four endings are the same as the regular -er/-ir endings (e.g., -iste of tuviste; -imos of tuvimos; -isteis of tuvisteis; -ieron of tuvieron).

Verbs Ending in -ar		Verbs Ending in -er/-ir		Verbs like tener
repasar		abrir		poder
repasé	repasamos	abrí	abrimos	pude	podimos
repasaste	repasasteis	abriste	abristeis	podiste	podisteis
repasó	repasaron	abrió	abrieron	pudo	podieron

Verbs ending in -car, -gar, and -zar have the following spelling change in the yo form of the preterite: c → qu; g → gu; z → c (e.g., yo saqué; yo pagué; yo comencé).

Stem-changing verbs ending in -ir also change stem in the preterite, but not in the boot (as they do in the present tense). The preterite stem change for -ir verbs happens in the third-person singular and plural forms. The specific changes that happen are as follows.

1. Verbs that change e → ie or e → i in the present change e → i in the preterite.
2. Verbs that change o → ue in the present change o → u in the preterite.

servir		dormir
serví	servimos	dormí	dormimos
serviste	servisteis	dormiste	dormisteis
sirvió	sirvieron	durmió	durmieron

The verbs ser and ir have the same conjugation in the preterite.

ser / ir

fui	fuimos
fuiste	fuisteis
fue	fueron

Comparisons

Comparisons of Inequality

When making comparisons using an adjective, the construction used is as follows: más or menos + adjective + que (e.g., Estoy más nervioso que tú).

The construction is the same when making comparisons using an adverb: más or menos + adverb + que (e.g., Ellos llegan más tarde que nosotros).

When doing a comparison of inequality focused on the verb, the construction used is as follows: más que or menos que (e.g., Nuestros abuelos siempre cocinan más que nosotros).

When talking about numbers, the construction used is as follows: más or menos + de + number (e.g., A veces ella tiene más de dos trabajos).

When comparing more than two things and distinguishing which one exceeds the others, the construction used is as follows: definite article + más or menos + adjective + de (e.g., Brasil es el más grande de los países en América del Sur).

Irregular comparative forms include mejor, peor, mayor, and menor. When using these four adjectives, no más or menos is needed (e.g., Anita es mayor que su hermana; Carlos y Juan son los mejores de la clase).

Comparisons of Equality

When using an adjective or adverb to compare two things that are equal, the construction used is as follows: tan + adjective or adverb + como (e.g., Las doctoras son tan simpáticas como las profesoras; Paco corre tan lentamente como yo).

In a comparison of equality with nouns, the construction used is as follows: tanto/tanta/tantos/tantas + noun + como (e.g., Isabel practica tantos deportes como su amigo; Es cierto que tengo tanta hambre como tú).

In a comparison of equality with verbs, the construction used is as follows: verb + tanto como (e.g., Leemos tanto como las muchachas).

Los glosarios / The Glossaries

The glossaries included in this workbook are tools that will help you acquire Spanish vocabulary so that you can use it effectively when communicating in the language. Following these brief introductory notes, you will find four different glossaries.

1. Glosario por tema / Glossary by Topic: This glossary groups words together by function so that you can study in one place, for example, the colors, months of the year, weather expressions, parts of the body, etc.
2. Glosario de cognados / Glossary of Cognates: This glossary includes Spanish words that are cognates with English words. Reviewing these words will help you gain a sense of how many Spanish words are similar to English words, and learning these cognates will aid your listening and reading comprehension greatly. Roughly one-third of all the Spanish words presented in this course are cognates with English words. To get the most out of this glossary, you should understand that the following suffixes are equivalent in English and Spanish.

English Suffix	Spanish Suffix	Example Cognates
-tion	-ción	celebration	la celebración
-sion	-sión	expression	la expresión
-ity	-idad	activity	la actividad
-ive	-ivo	progressive	progresivo
-ity	-idad	possibility	la posibilidad
-ed	-ado	frustrated	frustrado
-ly	-mente	exactly	exactamente
-tude	-tud	attitude	la actitud
-logy	-logía	technology	la tecnología

1. Glosario español-inglés / Spanish-English Glossary: This glossary gives you the English for a Spanish word.
2. Glosario inglés-español / English-Spanish Glossary: This glossary gives you the Spanish for an English word.

The words you will find in these glossaries are the ones that are presented in the 30 lessons. Throughout the course, the focus has been on high-frequency words, meaning words that are used most often by native speakers of Spanish. Your ability to learn and use the vocabulary presented in these glossaries will go a long way toward determining how successful you are in communicating with other Spanish speakers.

NB: Typically, Spanish nouns are presented in glossaries in the following way.

pared – wall (f) [which means that pared is “wall” in English and is a feminine noun]

It is important to know the gender of a noun because if you want to say, for example, “The wall is white,” you need to know that pared is feminine so you can correctly use the appropriate definite article (la) and the appropriate form of the adjective (blanca) to say La pared es blanca.

The problem with glossaries using the above format is that they promote the following kind of mental processing by the learner of Spanish: pared means “wall” and is feminine, so the way to say “the wall” must be la pared. That’s too much thinking and takes too much time.

In these glossaries, the Spanish word is presented with the definite article preceding it. So, pared is presented as follows.

la pared – wall [the audio glossary likewise presents the article before the noun]

With this kind of glossary entry, you are encouraged to learn that la pared means “the wall” (even though the English is provided as “wall” rather than the technically correct “the wall”). The very fact that pared is preceded by la tells you that it’s a feminine noun.

When you study vocabulary (and to be a successful language learner, you must study new words in order to understand and use them), you should learn nouns with their appropriate definite article (el or la) preceding them. That way, if you want to say in Spanish “The wall is white,” you automatically know that this would be La pared es blanca, because all along you have learned that the way to say “the wall” is la pared. Knowing that, blanca must be the appropriate form of the adjective to use, because pared is clearly a feminine noun.

There will be a few cases in which the definite article used before the noun is not indicative of the noun’s gender. In those few cases, the glossary entry will appear as follows.

el agua – water [fem.]

The above entry means that to say “the water” you say el agua, but the “[fem.]” following the word means that it is feminine. So, to say, for example, “The water is cold,” you would say El agua está fría (using the feminine form fría because agua is feminine). Once again, there are very few words like this in Spanish. In almost all cases, the definite article (el or la) preceding the noun will tell you the noun’s gender; words preceded by el are masculine, while words preceded by la are feminine.

When adjectives are presented, the masculine singular form of the adjective is included.

When people and professions are presented, sometimes both the masculine and feminine forms (e.g., la dentista – female dentist; el dentista – male dentist) are included. At other times, only the masculine form (e.g., el arquitecto – architect) is included. As you learn in the course, the feminine form of this noun would be the following: la arquitecta.

For stem-changing verbs, the stem change is noted. That mostrar, for example, is an o to ue stem-changing verb can be seen in mostrar (o → ue) — to show.

The abbreviations used in the glossaries are as follows.

fem.	feminine	pl.	plural	ind.	indirect	form.	formal

Dictionaries

It is always useful for a language learner to have access to a good dictionary. One that is recommended to beginning Spanish language learners is McGraw-Hill's Vox Everyday Spanish and English Dictionary. This dictionary includes just about all the words you're likely to come across without overwhelming you with too many entries.

In terms of online resources, the most useful dictionary is the one at wordreference.com. This is a particularly good website for a number of reasons. First, it allows you to find the English for a Spanish word, the Spanish for an English word, a definition in Spanish, and even Spanish synonyms for a given word. In addition to showing the WordReference definition, this website also allows you to consult the Collins online dictionary, which is another excellent resource.

Beyond the definitions you can find at wordreference.com, another useful feature of the website is the forum discussion section, which is content created by users of the dictionary. Someone asks a question in the forum, such as, "What's the difference between the word x and the word y?," and users will then respond, saying something like the following: "In Colombia, we say...." or "In Argentina, we use the word x when...." Some users write in Spanish while others write in English, and the answers to the questions asked in the forum give real insight into how words and expressions are used in daily communication by Spanish speakers.

One final dictionary worth mentioning is the dictionary of the Real Academia Española [Royal Spanish Academy], found at rae.es. All of the definitions in this dictionary are entirely in Spanish, so it's not an ideal resource for a beginning language learner. Nevertheless, it's a website worth taking a look at, given that the Real Academia Española is the official institution that oversees the Spanish language. This dictionary will become more useful to you as your level of Spanish improves.

Listening to Varieties of Spoken Spanish

There are two very interesting and useful academic websites that can help you become familiar with different varieties of spoken Spanish. One website, maintained by The Ohio State University, is called the Digital Catalog of the Sounds of Spanish and can be found at dialectos.osu.edu. If you go to this website, you will be able to see short videos of Spanish speakers from Spain, almost all of the Spanish-speaking countries in Latin America, and even the United States. Most of the videos also include a transcript of the Spanish being spoken by the person in the video. So, as you're listening to the words being spoken, you can, if you want, read the words as well.

Another academic website is called Spanish Proficiency Exercises, and you can find it at the University of Texas at Austin website at laits.utexas.edu/spe. This website also includes video clips of a variety of Spanish speakers from different countries talking about a wide range of topics. And very often, you can read the text of what the person is saying as you listen to the Spanish.

Both of these websites are recommended as a way to begin to get a sense of different ways that Spanish is spoken in different countries. It will allow you to compare, for example, a Mexican accent with one from Chile or a Guatemalan accent with one from Spain.

Practice with Grammar and Vocabulary

There are several useful websites that offer online practice of both grammar and vocabulary. One of these is found at conjuguemos.com (conjuguemos means "let's conjugate"). This website will allow you to practice, for example, adjective agreement with nouns, verb conjugation, comparisons, and many other grammatical topics. You enter answers to specific questions, and the website will let you know which answers are correct and which are incorrect. Some of the questions are based on what you read, while others relate to videos of different Spanish speakers.

Another useful website for practicing with the language is called Spanish Language and Culture with Barbara Kuczun Nelson and can be found at personal.colby.edu/~bknelson/SLC. This website offers a wide range of activities that allow you to work on developing your skills with a variety of grammar topics.

Grammar Reference

Any introductory Spanish textbook can be a good resource for you to consult regarding questions you might have related to grammar topics. Introductory textbooks are also good places to find readings that are not too difficult for beginning language learners.

An online resource that offers helpful explanations of grammar topics is spanishgrammarguide.com, a website developed by the Spanish Institute of Puebla. The grammar explanations on this website are in Spanish, but they are short and tend not to be too difficult to understand, even for beginning language learners. Several examples are given for all grammar points, allowing you to see the specific grammar topic being used in a variety of sentences.

Television and Radio Programming

With the growing number of channels on television, it's getting easier each year to find Spanish-speaking programs. Three specific networks that you might have access to where you live are Univisión, Telemundo, and Azteca. If you are able to find some channels in Spanish, you should tune in to the news—which is recommended for a few reasons.

First, newscasters tend to speak slowly and clearly. For a learner new to the language, this is exactly the kind of spoken Spanish you'll be most likely to understand. Moreover, when watching the news, you'll see clips or scenes of what the newscaster is discussing. These images accompanying the words you hear provide helpful context for what's being said, meaning that you'll likely be able to understand more of the Spanish that is being used. When listening to the radio in Spanish, news programs also tend to be the best kind of programming for beginning language learners.

You might also choose to watch other kinds of programs on television: sports, telenovelas (soap operas), dramas, game shows—anything, really. The more you are able to hear Spanish in any sort of context, the better. If your television set allows it, you should occasionally watch a program while looking at the captions in Spanish. You might be tempted to use closed captioning in English, but using it in Spanish will help you relate words you hear to the way they are spelled. And the entire all-Spanish experience—meaning that both the words you're hearing and the words you're reading will be in Spanish—will help get you more used to the language in its various aspects.

Websites of Interest

The Internet, of course, offers a plethora of websites in Spanish. Although language learners should at times use the Internet as a study guide—when consulting an online dictionary, for example—at other times it's a good idea to visit different websites in Spanish simply to explore topics that are of interest to you. As a beginning language learner, you certainly won't be able to understand everything you read. Nevertheless, your use of context, cognates, and conjecture (in other words, educated guesses) can help you make sense of much more than you might think possible in your reading.

To read the news in Spanish, you might consult cnnenespanol.com or the Spanish page of foxnewslatino.com. You can find news from Mexico at eluniversal.com.mx and news from Spain at elpais.com; those countries, of course, have other newspapers, too. If you're interested in news from a specific Spanish-speaking country, just google “periódico” [newspaper] with the name of the country and you'll be directed to a number of different websites.

To see a weather report, you can consult the website of Spain's Agencia Estatal de Meteorología [State Meteorological Agency] found at aemet.es, which always has a video of a meteorologist giving the weather for all the regions in Spain. If you like to read about sports, you might be interested in the U.S. website espndeportes.com, the Mexican website aztecadeportes.com, or the Spanish website marca.com. If your interests are culinary, the website elgourmet.com is a place where you can explore lots of recipes and articles related to food. Finally, Spain's public broadcasting service, Radio y televisión española (which can be found online at rtve.es), offers programs dedicated to news, sports, music, and more.

Any reading you do in Spanish is good for the development of your reading skills, so take some time to explore the Internet to find websites in Spanish that match your interests.
