Bill Worden, Ph.D.

Associate Professor of Spanish
Director of Spanish Programs
The University of Alabama

Dr. Bill Worden is an Associate Professor of Spanish and the Director of Spanish Programs in the Department of Modern Languages and Classics at The University of Alabama. Dr. Worden received his A.B. in Mathematics from Dartmouth College in 1985 and subsequently taught high school Spanish for five years in Illinois and Massachusetts. After studying in both Vermont and Madrid, he received his M.A. in Spanish from Middlebury College in 1996.

As a doctoral student at Brown University, Dr. Worden was awarded the David and Ruth Kossoff Prize for Leadership in Language Teaching by the Department of Hispanic Studies and the Presidential Award for Excellence in Teaching by the Graduate School. He also was chosen by fellow graduate students to give the address at the Graduate School commencement ceremony. In 2002, Dr. Worden received his Ph.D. in Hispanic Studies from Brown.

Since 2002, Dr. Worden has taught a wide variety of courses at The University of Alabama, ranging from Introductory Spanish and Advanced Grammar and Composition to undergraduate and graduate courses in 16th- and 17th-century Spanish literature. He has directed doctoral dissertations on colonial Latin American literature, early modern Spanish literature, and 20th-century Latin American literature.

Dr. Worden's main area of research is the work of Miguel de Cervantes, especially his novel Don Quixote. Dr. Worden has published in the fields of early modern Spanish literature, colonial Cuban theater, and 19th-century Spanish literature. He also has published on pedagogical topics, including how to teach Spanish at the middle school and high school levels and how to help undergraduate students make connections to Don Quixote. In addition, Dr. Worden is an award-winning speaker who has lectured on such subjects as the prose of Cervantes, early modern Spanish poetry, and approaches for helping beginning language students become comfortable speaking Spanish.

For a number of years, Dr. Worden served The University of Alabama's Department of Modern Languages and Classics as the Director of the Spanish Language Program and was responsible for supervising all graduate teaching assistants and instructors of introductory- and intermediate-level Spanish courses. In 2013, the Alabama Association of Foreign Language Teachers selected Dr. Worden as the winner of the annual Outstanding Foreign Language Teacher Award for Postsecondary. ■

Dr. Laura Rojas-Arce, author of the workbook and coauthor of the speaking activities, grew up in Costa Rica, where she studied psychology as an undergraduate student at the Universidad Hispanoamericana in Heredia. She completed her doctoral studies with a focus on contemporary Central American literature and received her Ph.D. from The University of Alabama in 2013. Dr. Rojas-Arce is an Instructor of Spanish at The University of Alabama, where she teaches courses ranging from Introductory Spanish and Advanced Grammar and Composition to courses on Latin American literature. ■

Workbook Introduction

Welcome to the workbook for Learning Spanish: How to Understand and Speak a New Language. The exercises included here are designed to help develop your reading and writing skills in Spanish while you practice the vocabulary and grammar presented in the lessons. This introduction briefly explains how this workbook fits in with the other components that accompany this course so that you'll know how best to make use of all of them to help develop your Spanish skills.

When you finish watching one of the 30 lessons, you should next listen to the audio glossary, which will give you the pronunciation and definition of all the new vocabulary words. Then, it will be time to practice what you've learned. The speaking activities that follow the audio glossary are designed to help you improve your listening and speaking skills, and the exercises in this workbook will allow you to practice your reading and writing skills. You can decide if you want to do the speaking activities before or after you do the workbook exercises, but you should do both of these only after watching the lesson and listening to the audio glossary. In addition to the exercises accompanying each lesson, you will find the Grammar Reference, Glossary by Topic, Glossary of Cognates, Spanish-English Glossary, English-Spanish Glossary, and Resources for Further Study at the end of the workbook.

Each section of this workbook begins with New Vocabulary, a listing of new words in the same order as they are presented in the audio glossary. Next, the General Review section summarizes the material covered in the lesson, allowing you to review grammatical, cultural, or vocabulary-related content. Then, you will find the Activities, which offer practice with the new grammar and vocabulary. At the end of every workbook section, you will find the Correct Answers, which will allow you to check your work. In addition to the Activities included after every lesson, this workbook also contains six Cultural Readings about different aspects of Latin American culture.

The Activities in this workbook are contextualized in a series of short stories dealing with several families and their friends and neighbors. These families live in Villa Celeste [Celestial Town], a neighborhood somewhere in Latin America. The principal characters in the stories are the Cortés Ruiz family, the Quirós García family, and the González Fallas family. The Cortés Ruiz family has three sons, and the Quirós García family has two daughters and a son. Those two families also have two very young granddaughters. The González Fallas family, who just recently moved to the neighborhood, has a son and a daughter. You will find the family trees for these families following this introduction.

Most of the words used in the Activities will be ones you will have already been introduced to in the course. When this is not the case, the workbook will give the English for the Spanish word. The six Cultural Readings do indeed include vocabulary and grammar you will have already seen in the course. But they also purposely include some material a bit beyond your current level of comprehension. This will force you to make some educated guesses while reading—a very useful skill for a language learner. You won't need to recognize every word or expression in a reading to gain a good understanding of it. The English translation for the Cultural Readings can be found after the Correct Answers, so you will be able to see how well you understood what you read.

And now, it's time to get to work. Or, as we would say in Spanish: ¡A trabajar! [Let's work!]. ■

II. Repaso general / General Review

A. Approach to Learning a New Language

Successful language learners have a positive reaction when faced with the unfamiliar. So, rather than allowing yourself to feel frustrated, confused, or annoyed when listening to Spanish, try to maintain a positive outlook and work to understand anything you can. It can help to think of communicating in Spanish as a puzzle to be solved or an interesting challenge to be met. When you hear spoken Spanish, focus on what's being said, don't be distracted by negative thoughts, and listen for cognates, which are words that are the same or almost the same in two languages. Spanish and English share many cognates, including curso / course; introductorio / introductory; profesor / professor; importante / important; aspecto / aspect; cultura / culture; and mucho / much.

B. The Spanish Language

The Spanish language, known as either español or castellano, developed in the Iberian Peninsula in the region of Castile, or Castilla in Spanish. According to the United Nations, Spanish is the third most-spoken language in the world, after Mandarin Chinese and English. Roughly half a billion people speak Spanish, which is spoken on four continents, is an official language of 20 countries, and is one of the official languages (along with English) of the U.S. territory of Puerto Rico.

Spanish is also spoken more and more each year in the mainland United States. According to the latest census data, almost 40 million people in the United States speak Spanish at home, which makes up more than 12 percent of the country's population. A 2015 report by the Instituto Cervantes, a governmental organization in Spain that focuses on the Spanish language, concluded that there are more Spanish speakers in the United States than there are in Spain.

C. Varieties of Spoken Spanish

The three main differences that distinguish how Spanish is spoken in one place versus another are vocabulary, accent, and grammar. Differences in vocabulary result in different words being used in different places to refer to the same thing. To say “the computer,” for example, in Latin America you'd say la computadora, while in Spain it's much more common to say el ordenador.

In terms of accent, there are differences between countries and even between regions within the same country. Perhaps the most notable difference in accent among Spanish speakers relates to the way to pronounce the letter z and the letter c followed by e or i. In Latin America, the letter z and the letter combinations ce and ci are pronounced with an s sound, while in northern and central Spain this is pronounced with a th sound. The Spanish word for “shoe” is zapato, which in Madrid is pronounced as “thapato” and in Latin America is pronounced “sapato.”

There are not many grammatical differences among regions, but there are a few, and one deals with the plural form of “you.” In both Spain and Latin America, the word ustedes is the formal, plural way to say “you.” In Spain, there's also an informal, plural way to say “you,” which is vosotros in the masculine or vosotras in the feminine. But vosotros and vosotras are not used in Latin America; instead, ustedes is used for the plural “you” in all cases.

Despite these differences in vocabulary, accent, and grammar, hundreds of millions of Spanish speakers communicate successfully across all the countries where the language is spoken. Speakers of Spanish—even from different regions—understand each other extremely well.

D. Pronunciation of Vowels

Pronouncing words in Spanish is simpler than it is in English because when you look at a letter in Spanish, with very rare exceptions you know exactly how to pronounce the sound of that letter. One challenging aspect of Spanish pronunciation is that there are sounds in the language that don't exist in English, and these can be difficult to pronounce at first.

Each of the five vowels—a, e, i, o, u—makes just one sound in Spanish, a short sound that stays the same from beginning to end.

- A, found in the common Spanish word casa, is the easiest vowel sound to make. For the other four vowel sounds, focus on keeping the vowel sound short and uniform.
- E makes the sound pronounced in the English word “take.” It's not “eyyyy.” You don't close it off at the end as you often do in English.
- I makes the sound pronounced in the word “fee.” It's not “iyyyy.”
- O makes the sound pronounced in “toll.” It's not “owwww.”
- U makes the sound pronounced in “rule.” It's not “uwww.”

The video lessons, audio glossaries, and speaking activities model proper pronunciation in Spanish.

E. Greetings

Among the very common greetings in Spanish are hola [hello]; ¿Qué tal? [How's it going?]; and ¿Cómo estás? and ¿Cómo está usted? [How are you?]. ¿Cómo estás? is the informal way to say “How are you?” to someone. ¿Cómo está usted? also asks “How are you?” but is used with someone you address formally.

Three ways to introduce yourself are Me llamo Bill [I call myself Bill, or My name is Bill]; Soy Bill [I am Bill]; and Mi nombre es Bill [My name is Bill].

Common expressions used when you meet someone for the first time are mucho gusto [nice to meet you]; encantado [pleased to meet you, masculine form]; encantada [pleased to meet you, feminine form]; Es un placer [It's a pleasure]; and igualmente [likewise].

Greetings dependent on the time of day include buenos días or buen día [good morning]; buenas tardes [good afternoon]; and buenas noches [good evening, or good night]. Ways to say “goodbye” include adiós [goodbye]; chao [bye]; hasta luego [see you later]; hasta mañana [see you tomorrow]; hasta pronto [see you soon]; and nos vemos [see you].

F. How Best to Approach This Course

If your goal is to work toward proficiency in Spanish, you should watch the video lessons and engage with the other course materials as well. In order to make significant progress with your language skills, you'll need to practice what's presented in the video lessons.

When you finish a lesson, you should next listen to the audio glossary, which will give you the pronunciation and definition of all new vocabulary words. Then, it will be time to practice what you've learned. The speaking activities for each lesson are designed to help you improve your listening and speaking skills. And the workbook exercises will allow you to practice your reading and writing. You can decide if you want to do the speaking activities before or after you do the workbook exercises, but you should do both of these only after watching the video lesson and listening to the audio glossary.

If you are able to involve someone else with your studies, you are encouraged to do so. Languages are meant for social interaction, so take the course with a friend or seek out opportunities to speak Spanish with someone who already knows the language. The more contact you have with Spanish, both within the course and beyond it, the better your progress will be.

G. Global Importance of the Spanish Language

Although it might seem that Spanish has gained importance in the United States only recently, in 1787 Thomas Jefferson wrote the following about the Spanish language in a letter to his nephew: "Bestow great attention on this, and endeavor to acquire an accurate knowledge of it. Our future connections with Spain and Spanish America, will render that language a valuable acquisition." What was true in Jefferson's time remains true today. Spanish is a world language, and its importance now extends beyond its use in other countries to the mainland of the United States.

Acquiring Spanish is a way of broadening your horizons and becoming more connected to the diverse traditions that are being lived out across oceans and right next door. A sincere desire to learn accompanied by diligent practice makes acquiring Spanish an achievable goal for people of all ages. And the benefits of being able to communicate in Spanish are significant. After all, half a billion people are waiting to talk with you.

¡Buenos días!

¡Buenas tardes!

¡Buenas noches!

II. Repaso general / General Review

A. Geography of the Spanish-Speaking World

Spanish is spoken in Europe, North America, Central America, the Caribbean, South America, and Africa. The countries where Spanish is spoken as an official language within each of these regions are as follows.

- Europe: Spain.
- North America: Mexico.
- Central America: Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama.
- The Caribbean: Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico.
- South America: Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Paraguay, Chile, Uruguay, Argentina.
- Africa: Equatorial Guinea.

As you learned in the first lesson, the United States has more Spanish speakers than Spain; in fact, the United States has more Spanish speakers than any other country except Mexico. Spanish is also widely spoken in Canada, Belize, and the Philippines.

B. Nouns

All nouns in Spanish have a gender, meaning that they are either masculine or feminine. Most nouns that end in -o are masculine, while most that end in -a are feminine. Beyond gender, nouns also have a number, meaning that they are either singular or plural.

C. Definite Articles

While “the” is the only definite article in English, in Spanish there are four forms of the definite article: el (masculine singular), la (feminine singular), los (masculine plural), and las (feminine plural). Examples of definite articles used with nouns include el libro [the book]; la mesa [the table]; los cuadernos [the notebooks, or the workbooks]; las señoras [the women]. When the preposition de [of] is followed by the definite article el, de + el contracts to del. So, El cuaderno del curso is “The workbook of the course,” or “The course’s workbook.”

Although nouns ending in -o are usually masculine and nouns ending in -a are usually feminine, there are many nouns in Spanish that have an ending other than -o or -a. For that reason, you should always learn a new noun with its accompanying definite article. As you learn, for example, that “the hotel” is el hotel, you are reinforcing that hotel is a masculine noun. And you need to know the gender of a noun, for example, so that you can use the proper form of an adjective to describe the noun.

Definite articles have a variety of uses in Spanish. As is the case with English, they can refer to something specific. For example, “The class is interesting” is La clase es interesante. Unlike English, definite articles are also used when talking about a noun in a general sense. To say, for example, “Freedom is important,” you would say La libertad es importante. Definite articles are also needed when speaking or writing about people with titles, such as señor, señora, señorita, profesor, profesora, doctor, and doctora. To say “Professor Ana Cano is popular,” for example, you would say La profesora Ana Cano es popular. No definite article is needed when talking directly to a person with a title, so “Hello, Professor Cano” is Hola, Profesora Cano.

D. Knowing the Gender of a Noun

You have learned that nouns ending in -a are usually feminine. Words ending in the suffixes -ión, -ad, and -tud are also almost always feminine. Examples of feminine nouns with these suffixes include la lección [lesson], la posibilidad [possibility], and la virtud [virtue]. [Note: Technically, la lección, for example, means “the lesson.” But throughout the workbook and audio glossaries, although the definite article appears before the noun in Spanish (and can thereby help you remember the noun’s gender), the definite article “the” does not appear before the noun in English.]

In the way that nouns ending in -o are usually masculine, nouns ending in -r and -l are also usually masculine. Examples of masculine nouns ending in -r and -l include el televisor [television set] and el hotel [hotel].

Words ending in -ista look feminine because they end in -a. But these words actually can be either masculine or feminine, as seen, for example, in el futbolista [male soccer player] and la futbolista [female soccer player]. Spanish words ending in -ma also look feminine because of the -a ending, but many of these words are actually masculine, including el sistema [system] and el problema [problem].

Specific words that seem to be one gender but are the other include el día [day] and el mapa [map], which are masculine, and la mano [hand], which is feminine.

Feminine nouns beginning with the sound -a in a stressed syllable use el rather than la as their definite article. El agua [water], for example, is indeed a feminine noun, but it uses el rather than la as its definite article. [Note: If la were used as the definite article for agua, then the two a sounds when pronounced would run together and sound like laaaagua. Using el instead of la avoids this problem.] Feminine nouns beginning with the sound a in a syllable that is not stressed keep the usual definite article of la (e.g., la actitud [attitude]).

E. Making Nouns Plural

The three rules for making a noun plural in Spanish are as follows.

1. If a noun ends in a vowel, add -s: la silla [chair] → las sillas.
2. If a noun ends in a consonant other than z, add -es: el papel [paper] → los papeles
3. If a noun ends in a z, change the z to c and add -es: el lápiz [pencil] → los lápices

F. The Alphabet in Spanish

The Spanish alphabet has 27 letters. They include the 26 used in English plus the letter ñ (as seen in España), which comes right after the letter n in the alphabet.

G. Pronunciation of Several Consonant Sounds

Pronunciation is not about letters, and it's not about spelling—it's about sound. So, listen carefully when you hear words in Spanish and do your best to reproduce the sounds you hear.

The letters f, l, m, and n are pronounced the same in Spanish as they are in English and are found in such words as la profesora [female professor], la libertad [liberty, freedom], la música [music], and la nación [nation].

The letter s is always pronounced as s and never as z. The name José, for example, is pronounced with an s sound, not a z sound.

The letter h is silent in Spanish, so el hotel [hotel], for example, should be pronounced as el otel. When h follows c, it makes a ch sound, as found in la chica [girl].

The letter t in Spanish is never aspirated when pronounced, meaning that you produce no puff of air when you make the sound of t. In fact, the t in Spanish sounds like a combination of t and d.

The sound that corresponds with single r in Spanish is similar to the sound made when d is pronounced in English. The sound corresponding to j in Spanish, as used in the names Juan and José, has no exact equivalent in English. Both the audio glossaries and the speaking activities offer numerous opportunities for you to listen to the pronunciation of words in Spanish and practice your own pronunciation. The best way to improve your pronunciation is to listen carefully when you hear Spanish and speak a lot of Spanish yourself.

III. Actividades / Activities

II. Repaso general / General Review

A. Improving Your Ability to Speak

It's important as a beginning language learner that you take every opportunity to speak Spanish. Don't wait until you've learned more vocabulary and grammar. ¡Hablen español ahora! ["Speak Spanish now!"] The best way to improve your spoken Spanish is to speak more.

B. Subject Pronouns

The singular subject pronouns in Spanish are yo – I; tú – you [singular, informal]; usted – you [singular, formal]; él – he; and ella – she. The plural subject pronouns are nosotros – we [masculine]; nosotras – we [feminine]; vosotros – you [masculine plural, informal]; vosotras – you [feminine plural, informal]; ustedes – you [plural, formal]; ellos – they [masculine]; and ellas – they [feminine].

The informal, singular way to say "you" is tú; the formal, singular way to say "you" is usted. If you're speaking to a family member, a friend, or someone else you're well acquainted with, you'll probably use tú. You'll use usted when talking with someone you have a formal relationship with or with someone you don't know well. If you're not sure which pronoun to use, it's better to use usted, because using the informal tú can be seen as rude by someone you don't know well.

The vosotros and vosotras forms, which are plural, informal ways to say "you," are used only in Spain. In Latin America, the plural of tú is ustedes and the plural of usted is ustedes; vosotros and vosotras are never used in Latin America.

The pronouns nosotros, vosotros, and ellos are used when referring to a group of all men or a mixed group of men and women. Even a group of many women and just one man would be referred to with these masculine pronouns. The pronouns nosotras, vosotras, and ellas are used only when every member of the group is female.

C. The Verb ser

The infinitive form, which is the verb form found in the dictionary, of all Spanish verbs ends in -ar, -er, or -ir. Ser, the infinitive form meaning "to be," has the following six forms in the present tense: soy, eres, es, somos, sois, son. Conjugating a verb means giving its proper verb forms for different subjects in a given tense. Ser is conjugated with the subject pronouns in the present tense as follows.

Ser with singular subject pronouns:	yo soy; tú eres; usted, él, or ella es
Ser with plural subject pronouns:	nosotros or nosotras somos; vosotros or vosotras sois; ustedes, ellos, or ellas son

Any singular subject that is not yo or tú uses the verb form es (e.g., La clase es importante).

Any plural subject that is not nosotros, nosotras, vosotros, or vosotras uses the verb form son (e.g., Los amigos son optimistas).

Ser is used 1) to identify a person or thing (Ella es Claudia); 2) to talk about one's profession (Son doctores), origin, or nationality (Roberto es de Chile); or 3) to describe inherent characteristics of someone or something (Carla es inteligente; El hotel es elegante).

D. Cognates

Spanish and English share many cognates, which are words that are the same or similar in two languages. Sometimes Spanish cognates are spelled the same as the word in English: normal, hotel, usual. Other Spanish cognates are spelled similar to, but not the same as, the word in English: activo, responsable, excelente. Your comprehension of Spanish will improve if you listen for cognates when conversing and look for them when reading.

Occasionally, a Spanish word will look like an English word but mean something else. These words are called false cognates. Examples include largo (which looks like "large" but means "long") and colegio (which looks like "college" but means "high school"). False cognates, however, are relatively rare compared to the vast number of cognates shared by English and Spanish.

E. Adjectives

Adjectives in Spanish must agree in number and gender with the noun being modified. So, if the subject is masculine singular, the adjective must also be masculine singular, and if the subject is feminine plural, the adjective must also be feminine plural.

Adjectives ending in -o have four forms. For example, viejo, meaning "old," has the following four forms: viejo (masculine singular); vieja (feminine singular); viejos (masculine plural); viejas (feminine plural).

Adjectives ending in -e have two forms, as can be seen in responsable (masculine and feminine singular) and responsables (masculine and feminine plural).

Adjectives ending in -ista have two forms, as can be seen in pesimista (masculine and feminine singular) and pesimistas (masculine and feminine plural).

* As is the case with all of these examples, the way you address these people depends on the closeness of your relationship with them. It's also possible that you might address your uncle in a formal way.

 The word fantástica already conveys the idea of something extremely good, so it would be odd to say muy fantástica because it would be redundant. Simpática is the better answer.

II. Repaso general / General Review

A. Conjugating Verbs in Spanish

As you learned in an earlier lesson, the infinitive form of a verb is the form that appears in the dictionary and is a nonconjugated verb form. All Spanish verbs have infinitive forms ending either in -ar, -er, or -ir, so the three kinds of verbs in Spanish are -ar verbs, -er verbs, and -ir verbs.

The infinitive form of the verb has two parts: the stem of the word (which is everything before the ending) and the ending itself (which is either -ar, -er, or -ir). For example, the stem of viajar (“to travel”) is viaj-, and the verb’s ending is -ar. Once you’ve identified the stem of a verb, you conjugate the verb by adding the appropriate ending to the stem for the given subject.

B. Conjugating Regular -ar Verbs in the Present

The present tense endings for regular -ar verbs are -o, -as, -a, -amos, -áis, and -an. The following is an example of a regular -ar verb conjugated in the present tense.

ayudar [to help]
yo	ayudo	nosotros, nosotras	ayudamos
tú	ayudas	vosotros, vosotras	ayudáis
él, ella, usted	ayuda	ellos, ellas, ustedes	ayudan

The verb form ayudamos, for example, can mean “We help,” “We do help,” “We are helping,” or even—in certain contexts—“We are going to help.”

C. When to Use Subject Pronouns before Verbs

Because the ending of a verb indicates the verb’s subject, most often Spanish speakers do not include a subject pronoun before the verb. There are, however, two common cases in which subject pronouns are used. They are often used before verbs in the third-person singular and plural because there can be many possible subjects for these verb forms. Trabaja mucho, for example, could mean “You work a lot” (with the subject being usted), or it could be “He works a lot,” or “She works a lot.” To clarify, then, it’s common to include a subject with a third-person form of the verb and say, for example, Usted estudia mucho.

Another time to use a subject pronoun is to emphasize the subject. If, for example, people around you are saying that they don’t sing much, and you actually do, it would be appropriate to say Yo canto mucho, emphasizing “I do sing a lot.”

D. More Agreement of Adjectives with Nouns

Adjectives ending in -dor in the masculine singular have four forms, as can be seen with the adjective meaning “talkative”: hablador, habladora, habladores, habladoras. Any adjective of nationality that ends in a consonant also has four forms, as seen in the adjective meaning “French”: francés, francesa, franceses, francesas. Except for adjectives ending in -o, -dor, and ones ending in consonants that express nationality, almost all other adjectives in Spanish have two forms (e.g., fenomenal, fenomenales; terrible, terribles).

E. Placement of Adjectives

Adjectives in Spanish almost always follow the noun modified (e.g., las doctoras ideales). To modify a noun with two adjectives, put the adjectives after the noun and put y (“and”) between them (e.g., el pianista famoso y egoísta). Bueno and malo can go before or after the modified noun. Before masculine nouns, both of these adjectives drop the -o (e.g., el buen hombre; el mal día). Adjectives of quantity precede the modified noun (e.g., muchos estudiantes; poca agua).

F. Pronunciation of Consonants

The double-r sound requires that you roll your r, creating a sound that does not exist in English. The sound is required when a word has the letter combination rr, when a word starts with r, and after the letters l, n, and s (e.g., carro, Raúl, alrededor, Enrique, Israel). You make the sound corresponding with rr by having your tongue vibrate up against the center of the roof of your mouth.

At the start of a word or after the letters n and l, you pronounce d as you would in English. After a vowel, the sound of the d should be like the th sound of the English word “this.” When saying the name David, for example, you should pronounce the first d similar to the d sound made in English and the second d similar to the th of “this.”

There are variations by country, but in many places, both y and ll are pronounced similar to the way y is pronounced in English.

Articles

Definite Articles			Indefinite Articles
	masc.	fem.		masc.	fem.
sing.	el	la	sing.	un	una
pl.	los	las	pl.	unos	unas

The two contractions in Spanish are as follows.

a + el = al de + el = del

Feminine nouns beginning with the sound a in a stressed syllable use el rather than la as their definite article and un rather than una as their indefinite article (e.g., el águila rápida, un águila rápida).

Nouns

Words ending in -o are usually masculine; words ending in the letters -r and -l are also usually masculine (e.g., el maestro, el televisor, el papel). Words ending in -a are usually feminine; words ending in the suffixes -ión, -ad, and -tud are also almost always feminine (e.g., la mesa, la nación, la posibilidad, la virtud). Words ending in -ista can be either masculine or feminine (e.g., el dentista, la dentista).

The rules for making a noun plural are as follows.

1. If a noun ends in a vowel, add an -s: la silla → las sillas.
2. If a noun ends in a consonant other than z, add -es: el papel → los papeles.
3. If a noun ends in a z, change the z to c and add -es: el lápiz → los lápices.

Adjectives

Adjectives must agree in number and gender with the noun modified. Adjectives ending in -o and -dor and adjectives of nationality ending in a consonant have four forms.

		masc.	fem.	masc.	fem.	masc.	fem.
sing.		guapo	guapa	hablador	habladora	inglés	inglesa
pl.		guapos	guapas	habladores	habladoras	ingleses	inglesas

Almost all other adjective have two forms.

		masc. & fem.	masc. & fem.
sing.		elegante	fenomenal
pl.		elegantes	fenomenales

Adjectives in Spanish typically follow the noun modified (e.g., Queremos ver la casa grande y los parques bonitos).

Possessive Adjectives

mi / mis	nuestro / nuestra / nuestros / nuestras
tu / tus	vuestro / vuestra / vuestros / vuestras
su / sus	su / sus

Possessive adjectives precede the modified noun (e.g., Tengo mis libros y ella tiene sus papeles).

Demonstrative Adjectives

	masc.	fem.	masc.	fem.	masc.	fem.
sing.	este	esta	ese	esa	aquel	aquella
pl.	estos	estas	esos	esas	aquellos	aquellas

Demonstrative adjectives precede the modified noun (e.g., Me gusta esta computadora aquí).

Demonstrative adjectives, which modify a noun, can also be used as demonstrative pronouns, which take the place of a noun (e.g., ¿Cuál de los restaurantes prefieres, ese o aquel?).

Adverbs

One way to form an adverb is to add the suffix -mente to the feminine singular form of an adjective (e.g., activa + mente → activamente; general + mente → generalmente). A common way to make an adverbial expression is to use the preposition con before a noun (e.g., con frecuencia, con cuidado).

Pronouns

Subject Pronouns				Prepositional Pronouns
yo	nosotros, nosotras			mí	nosotros, nosotras
tú	vosotros, vosotras			ti	vosotros, vosotras
usted	ustedes			usted	ustedes
él	ellos			él	ellos
ella	ellas			ella	ellas

Reflexive Pronouns		Direct Object Pronouns		Indirect Object Pronouns
me	nos	me	nos	me	nos
te	os	te	os	te	os
se	se	lo	los	le	les
		la	las

Direct object pronouns, indirect object pronouns, and reflexive pronouns go either before a conjugated verb or after and attached to an infinitive or a present participle. Examples include the following.

Lo vamos a hacer mañana or Vamos a hacerlo mañana.

Les quiero dar todo el dinero or Quiero darles todo el dinero.

Me estoy poniendo los zapatos or Estoy poniéndome los zapatos.

The indirect object pronoun always precedes the direct object pronoun when both are used in the same sentence (e.g., Si tengo los papeles, te los puedo mostrar).

Both le and les become se before lo, la, los, and las (e.g., Cuando los estudiantes quieren más tiempo, sus maestros siempre se lo dan).

Verbs

Present Tense of Regular Verbs

Once you learn the regular -ar endings in the present tense, you can learn the -er and -ir endings by knowing the following.

1. The -er endings have just one difference from the -ar endings: Change a → e for every -ar ending, and that gives you the -er endings.
2. There are only two differences between the -er endings and the -ir endings: emos → imos and éis → ís.

bailar		comer		vivir
bailo	bailamos	como	comemos	vivo	vivimos
bailas	bailáis	comes	coméis	vives	vivís
baila	bailan	come	comen	vive	viven

Present Tense of Commonly Used Irregular Verbs

ser		estar		ir
soy	somos	estoy	estamos	voy	vamos
eres	sois	estás	estáis	vas	vais
es	son	está	están	va	van

tener		venir		dar
tengo	tenemos	vengo	venimos	doy	damos
tienes	tenéis	vienes	venís	das	dais
tiene	tienen	viene	vienen	da	dan

The following verbs have irregular yo forms in the present tense: saber (yo sé); conocer (yo conozco); hacer (yo hago); poner (yo pongo); traer (yo traigo); salir (yo salgo); verbs ending in -ger, such as proteger (yo protejo); and verbs ending in -cer or -cir, such as ofrecer (yo ofrezco) and conducir (yo conduzco).

Present Tense of Stem-Changing Verbs

Verbs that change stem:

1. Have one of four stem changes: e → ie, e → i, o → ue, u → ue.
2. Have regular endings.
3. Change stem in all singular forms and in the third-person plural (in the boot).

querer		pedir		recordar		jugar
quiero	queremos	pido	pedimos	recuerdo	recordamos	juego	jugamos
quieres	queréis	pides	pedís	recuerdas	recordáis	juegas	jugáis
quiere	quieren	pide	piden	recuerda	recuerdan	juega	juegan

Talking about Something Happening Right Now

The present progressive, used to talk about something happening right now, is formed as follows: estar in the present + present participle. To form the present participle, do the following: For an -ar verb, drop the -ar ending and add -ando; for an -er or -ir verb, drop the -er or -ir ending and add -iendo (e.g., bailar → bailando; aprender → aprendiendo; abrir → abriendo).

Verbs ending in -er or -ir that have stems ending in a vowel have irregular present participles. Instead of ending in -iendo, the participle for these verbs ends in -yendo with a y (e.g., leer → leyendo; oír → oyendo; traer → trayendo).

An example of the present progressive being used is Estamos comiendo ahora.

Talking about the Future

Two ways to talk about the future are as follows.

1. Use the present tense (e.g., Mañana te doy la computadora).
2. Use the construction ir + a + infinitive (e.g., Esta noche vamos a trabajar mucho).

Talking about the Recent Past

Acabar in the present + de + infinitive is used to express a recent past event (e.g., La profesora acaba de explicar la lección).

Expressing How Long Something Has Been Going On

A construction that expresses how long something has been going on is hace + time period + que + present tense of verb (e.g., Hace cuatro meses que estudiamos español).

Another way to express how long something has been going on is with the question ¿Desde cuándo + subject + present tense of verb? (e.g., ¿Desde cuándo trabajas aquí?).

There are three ways that a question like this could be answered. One way is with the construction Desde que + subject + present tense of verb (e.g., Desde que trabajo en la universidad). A second way to answer the question is with the construction Desde + specific point in time (e.g., Desde el mes pasado). A third way to answer the question is with the construction Desde hace + time period (e.g., Desde hace tres años).

Usted and ustedes Commands

To form an usted command:

1. Drop the -o ending from the yo form of the verb in the present tense.
2. For -ar verbs, add an e, and for -er and -ir verbs, add an a.

Examples of usted commands include the following: caminar → camine; aprender → aprenda; abrir → abra.

Stem-changing verbs follow this same rule to form the usted command (e.g., pensar → piense; dormir → duerma; servir → sirva). Many verbs that are irregular in the present tense have regular usted command forms, meaning that they follow the same rules as other verbs (e.g., conocer → conozca; oír → oiga; venir → venga).

Verbs ending in -car, -gar, and -zar have the following spelling changes in the usted command form: For verbs ending in -car, the change is c → qu; for verbs ending in -gar, the change is g → gu; for verbs ending in -zar, the change is z → c (e.g., tocar → toque; buscar → busque; pagar → pague).

The irregular usted command forms are as follows: dar → dé; estar → esté; ser → sea; saber → sepa; ir → vaya.

Putting a no before an usted command makes it negative (e.g., No coma). Adding an -n to the usted command makes it an ustedes command (e.g., Amigos, vengan a nuestra casa). A no and an -n at the end of the command results in a negative ustedes command (e.g., Por favor, chicos, no vayan ahora).

Affirmative tú Commands

The affirmative tú command is the third-person singular form of the verb in the present tense (e.g., estudiar → estudia; comer → come; abrir → abre; jugar → juega; servir → sirve; oír → oye).

There are eight irregular tú commands: venir → ven; salir → sal; poner → pon; tener → ten; hacer → haz; ser → sé; decir → di; ir → ve.

Negative tú Commands

The negative tú command is formed in the following way: no + usted command + -s (e.g., trabajar → no trabajes; tener → no tengas; vivir → no vivas; ser → no seas; hacer → no hagas).

Affirmative vosotros Commands

To make a vosotros command, drop the -r of the infinitive and replace it with a -d (e.g., hablar → hablad; tener → tened; dormir → dormid). The vosotros command is only used in Spain; a Latin American would use an ustedes command rather than a vosotros command.

Using Pronouns with Commands

Three types of pronouns can be used with commands: direct object pronouns, indirect object pronouns, and reflexive pronouns. These pronouns go after affirmative commands and before negative commands, as shown below. Notice that the first three commands below are tú commands, and the final three commands are usted commands.

	Infinitive	Pronoun(s)	Affirmative Command	Negative Command
tú commands	dar	me + lo	dámelo	no me lo des despertarse	se	despiértate	no te despiertes
	hacer	lo	hazlo	no lo hagas
usted commands	acostarse	se	acuéstese	no se acueste
	comer	las	cómalas	no las coma
	escribir	le + la	escribasela	no se la escriba

Preterite Tense

Once you learn the regular -ar endings in the preterite tense, you can learn the -er/-ir endings and the endings for verbs like tener by knowing the following.

1. The endings for -er and -ir verbs are the same, and they all start with the letter i. In fact, the -er and -ir endings for four subjects (yo, tú, nosotros, vosotros) can be formed by changing the first letter of the -ar ending to i (e.g., é → í; aste → iste; amos → imos; asteis → isteis).
2. The differences in endings between -ar and -er/-ir verbs are as follows for the usted and ustedes forms: ó → ió; aron → ieron.
3. The preterite endings for verbs like tener are the -ar endings without the accent for the yo and usted forms (e.g., -e of tuve; -o of tuvo). The other four endings are the same as the regular -er/-ir endings (e.g., -iste of tuviste; -imos of tuvimos; -isteis of tuvisteis; -ieron of tuvieron).

Verbs Ending in -ar		Verbs Ending in -er/-ir		Verbs like tener
repasar		abrir		poder
repasé	repasamos	abrí	abrimos	pude	podimos
repasaste	repasasteis	abriste	abristeis	podiste	podisteis
repasó	repasaron	abrió	abrieron	pudo	podieron

Verbs ending in -car, -gar, and -zar have the following spelling change in the yo form of the preterite: c → qu; g → gu; z → c (e.g., yo saqué; yo pagué; yo comencé).

Stem-changing verbs ending in -ir also change stem in the preterite, but not in the boot (as they do in the present tense). The preterite stem change for -ir verbs happens in the third-person singular and plural forms. The specific changes that happen are as follows.

1. Verbs that change e → ie or e → i in the present change e → i in the preterite.
2. Verbs that change o → ue in the present change o → u in the preterite.

servir		dormir
serví	servimos	dormí	dormimos
serviste	servisteis	dormiste	dormisteis
sirvió	sirvieron	durmió	durmieron

The verbs ser and ir have the same conjugation in the preterite.

ser / ir

fui	fuimos
fuiste	fuisteis
fue	fueron

Comparisons

Comparisons of Inequality

When making comparisons using an adjective, the construction used is as follows: más or menos + adjective + que (e.g., Estoy más nervioso que tú).

The construction is the same when making comparisons using an adverb: más or menos + adverb + que (e.g., Ellos llegan más tarde que nosotros).

When doing a comparison of inequality focused on the verb, the construction used is as follows: más que or menos que (e.g., Nuestros abuelos siempre cocinan más que nosotros).

When talking about numbers, the construction used is as follows: más or menos + de + number (e.g., A veces ella tiene más de dos trabajos).

When comparing more than two things and distinguishing which one exceeds the others, the construction used is as follows: definite article + más or menos + adjective + de (e.g., Brasil es el más grande de los países en América del Sur).

Irregular comparative forms include mejor, peor, mayor, and menor. When using these four adjectives, no más or menos is needed (e.g., Anita es mayor que su hermana; Carlos y Juan son los mejores de la clase).

Comparisons of Equality

When using an adjective or adverb to compare two things that are equal, the construction used is as follows: tan + adjective or adverb + como (e.g., Las doctoras son tan simpáticas como las profesoras; Paco corre tan lentamente como yo).

In a comparison of equality with nouns, the construction used is as follows: tanto/tanta/tantos/tantas + noun + como (e.g., Isabel practica tantos deportes como su amigo; Es cierto que tengo tanta hambre como tú).

In a comparison of equality with verbs, the construction used is as follows: verb + tanto como (e.g., Leemos tanto como las muchachas).

Los glosarios / The Glossaries

The glossaries included in this workbook are tools that will help you acquire Spanish vocabulary so that you can use it effectively when communicating in the language. Following these brief introductory notes, you will find four different glossaries.

1. Glosario por tema / Glossary by Topic: This glossary groups words together by function so that you can study in one place, for example, the colors, months of the year, weather expressions, parts of the body, etc.
2. Glosario de cognados / Glossary of Cognates: This glossary includes Spanish words that are cognates with English words. Reviewing these words will help you gain a sense of how many Spanish words are similar to English words, and learning these cognates will aid your listening and reading comprehension greatly. Roughly one-third of all the Spanish words presented in this course are cognates with English words. To get the most out of this glossary, you should understand that the following suffixes are equivalent in English and Spanish.

English Suffix	Spanish Suffix	Example Cognates
-tion	-ción	celebration	la celebración
-sion	-sión	expression	la expresión
-ity	-idad	activity	la actividad
-ive	-ivo	progressive	progresivo
-ity	-idad	possibility	la posibilidad
-ed	-ado	frustrated	frustrado
-ly	-mente	exactly	exactamente
-tude	-tud	attitude	la actitud
-logy	-logía	technology	la tecnología

1. Glosario español-inglés / Spanish-English Glossary: This glossary gives you the English for a Spanish word.
2. Glosario inglés-español / English-Spanish Glossary: This glossary gives you the Spanish for an English word.

The words you will find in these glossaries are the ones that are presented in the 30 lessons. Throughout the course, the focus has been on high-frequency words, meaning words that are used most often by native speakers of Spanish. Your ability to learn and use the vocabulary presented in these glossaries will go a long way toward determining how successful you are in communicating with other Spanish speakers.

NB: Typically, Spanish nouns are presented in glossaries in the following way.

pared – wall (f) [which means that pared is “wall” in English and is a feminine noun]

It is important to know the gender of a noun because if you want to say, for example, “The wall is white,” you need to know that pared is feminine so you can correctly use the appropriate definite article (la) and the appropriate form of the adjective (blanca) to say La pared es blanca.

The problem with glossaries using the above format is that they promote the following kind of mental processing by the learner of Spanish: pared means “wall” and is feminine, so the way to say “the wall” must be la pared. That’s too much thinking and takes too much time.

In these glossaries, the Spanish word is presented with the definite article preceding it. So, pared is presented as follows.

la pared – wall [the audio glossary likewise presents the article before the noun]

With this kind of glossary entry, you are encouraged to learn that la pared means “the wall” (even though the English is provided as “wall” rather than the technically correct “the wall”). The very fact that pared is preceded by la tells you that it’s a feminine noun.

When you study vocabulary (and to be a successful language learner, you must study new words in order to understand and use them), you should learn nouns with their appropriate definite article (el or la) preceding them. That way, if you want to say in Spanish “The wall is white,” you automatically know that this would be La pared es blanca, because all along you have learned that the way to say “the wall” is la pared. Knowing that, blanca must be the appropriate form of the adjective to use, because pared is clearly a feminine noun.

There will be a few cases in which the definite article used before the noun is not indicative of the noun’s gender. In those few cases, the glossary entry will appear as follows.

el agua – water [fem.]

The above entry means that to say “the water” you say el agua, but the “[fem.]” following the word means that it is feminine. So, to say, for example, “The water is cold,” you would say El agua está fría (using the feminine form fría because agua is feminine). Once again, there are very few words like this in Spanish. In almost all cases, the definite article (el or la) preceding the noun will tell you the noun’s gender; words preceded by el are masculine, while words preceded by la are feminine.

When adjectives are presented, the masculine singular form of the adjective is included.

When people and professions are presented, sometimes both the masculine and feminine forms (e.g., la dentista – female dentist; el dentista – male dentist) are included. At other times, only the masculine form (e.g., el arquitecto – architect) is included. As you learn in the course, the feminine form of this noun would be the following: la arquitecta.

For stem-changing verbs, the stem change is noted. That mostrar, for example, is an o to ue stem-changing verb can be seen in mostrar (o → ue) — to show.

The abbreviations used in the glossaries are as follows.

masc.	masculine	sing.	singular	dir.	direct	inf.	informal
fem.	feminine	pl.	plural	ind.	indirect	form.	formal
adj.	adjective			obj.	object

Dictionaries

It is always useful for a language learner to have access to a good dictionary. One that is recommended to beginning Spanish language learners is McGraw-Hill's Vox Everyday Spanish and English Dictionary. This dictionary includes just about all the words you're likely to come across without overwhelming you with too many entries.

In terms of online resources, the most useful dictionary is the one at wordreference.com. This is a particularly good website for a number of reasons. First, it allows you to find the English for a Spanish word, the Spanish for an English word, a definition in Spanish, and even Spanish synonyms for a given word. In addition to showing the WordReference definition, this website also allows you to consult the Collins online dictionary, which is another excellent resource.

Beyond the definitions you can find at wordreference.com, another useful feature of the website is the forum discussion section, which is content created by users of the dictionary. Someone asks a question in the forum, such as, "What's the difference between the word x and the word y?," and users will then respond, saying something like the following: "In Colombia, we say...." or "In Argentina, we use the word x when...." Some users write in Spanish while others write in English, and the answers to the questions asked in the forum give real insight into how words and expressions are used in daily communication by Spanish speakers.

One final dictionary worth mentioning is the dictionary of the Real Academia Española [Royal Spanish Academy], found at rae.es. All of the definitions in this dictionary are entirely in Spanish, so it's not an ideal resource for a beginning language learner. Nevertheless, it's a website worth taking a look at, given that the Real Academia Española is the official institution that oversees the Spanish language. This dictionary will become more useful to you as your level of Spanish improves.

Listening to Varieties of Spoken Spanish

There are two very interesting and useful academic websites that can help you become familiar with different varieties of spoken Spanish. One website, maintained by The Ohio State University, is called the Digital Catalog of the Sounds of Spanish and can be found at dialectos.osu.edu. If you go to this website, you will be able to see short videos of Spanish speakers from Spain, almost all of the Spanish-speaking countries in Latin America, and even the United States. Most of the videos also include a transcript of the Spanish being spoken by the person in the video. So, as you're listening to the words being spoken, you can, if you want, read the words as well.

Another academic website is called Spanish Proficiency Exercises, and you can find it at the University of Texas at Austin website at laits.utexas.edu/spe. This website also includes video clips of a variety of Spanish speakers from different countries talking about a wide range of topics. And very often, you can read the text of what the person is saying as you listen to the Spanish.

Both of these websites are recommended as a way to begin to get a sense of different ways that Spanish is spoken in different countries. It will allow you to compare, for example, a Mexican accent with one from Chile or a Guatemalan accent with one from Spain.

Practice with Grammar and Vocabulary

There are several useful websites that offer online practice of both grammar and vocabulary. One of these is found at conjuguemos.com (conjuguemos means "let's conjugate"). This website will allow you to practice, for example, adjective agreement with nouns, verb conjugation, comparisons, and many other grammatical topics. You enter answers to specific questions, and the website will let you know which answers are correct and which are incorrect. Some of the questions are based on what you read, while others relate to videos of different Spanish speakers.

Another useful website for practicing with the language is called Spanish Language and Culture with Barbara Kuczun Nelson and can be found at personal.colby.edu/~bknelson/SLC. This website offers a wide range of activities that allow you to work on developing your skills with a variety of grammar topics.

Grammar Reference

Any introductory Spanish textbook can be a good resource for you to consult regarding questions you might have related to grammar topics. Introductory textbooks are also good places to find readings that are not too difficult for beginning language learners.

An online resource that offers helpful explanations of grammar topics is spanishgrammarguide.com, a website developed by the Spanish Institute of Puebla. The grammar explanations on this website are in Spanish, but they are short and tend not to be too difficult to understand, even for beginning language learners. Several examples are given for all grammar points, allowing you to see the specific grammar topic being used in a variety of sentences.

Television and Radio Programming

With the growing number of channels on television, it's getting easier each year to find Spanish-speaking programs. Three specific networks that you might have access to where you live are Univisión, Telemundo, and Azteca. If you are able to find some channels in Spanish, you should tune in to the news—which is recommended for a few reasons.

First, newscasters tend to speak slowly and clearly. For a learner new to the language, this is exactly the kind of spoken Spanish you'll be most likely to understand. Moreover, when watching the news, you'll see clips or scenes of what the newscaster is discussing. These images accompanying the words you hear provide helpful context for what's being said, meaning that you'll likely be able to understand more of the Spanish that is being used. When listening to the radio in Spanish, news programs also tend to be the best kind of programming for beginning language learners.

You might also choose to watch other kinds of programs on television: sports, telenovelas (soap operas), dramas, game shows—anything, really. The more you are able to hear Spanish in any sort of context, the better. If your television set allows it, you should occasionally watch a program while looking at the captions in Spanish. You might be tempted to use closed captioning in English, but using it in Spanish will help you relate words you hear to the way they are spelled. And the entire all-Spanish experience—meaning that both the words you're hearing and the words you're reading will be in Spanish—will help get you more used to the language in its various aspects.

Websites of Interest

The Internet, of course, offers a plethora of websites in Spanish. Although language learners should at times use the Internet as a study guide—when consulting an online dictionary, for example—at other times it's a good idea to visit different websites in Spanish simply to explore topics that are of interest to you. As a beginning language learner, you certainly won't be able to understand everything you read. Nevertheless, your use of context, cognates, and conjecture (in other words, educated guesses) can help you make sense of much more than you might think possible in your reading.

To read the news in Spanish, you might consult cnnenespanol.com or the Spanish page of foxnewslatino.com. You can find news from Mexico at eluniversal.com.mx and news from Spain at elpais.com; those countries, of course, have other newspapers, too. If you're interested in news from a specific Spanish-speaking country, just google “periódico” [newspaper] with the name of the country and you'll be directed to a number of different websites.

To see a weather report, you can consult the website of Spain's Agencia Estatal de Meteorología [State Meteorological Agency] found at aemet.es, which always has a video of a meteorologist giving the weather for all the regions in Spain. If you like to read about sports, you might be interested in the U.S. website espndeportes.com, the Mexican website aztecadeportes.com, or the Spanish website marca.com. If your interests are culinary, the website elgourmet.com is a place where you can explore lots of recipes and articles related to food. Finally, Spain's public broadcasting service, Radio y televisión española (which can be found online at rtve.es), offers programs dedicated to news, sports, music, and more.

Any reading you do in Spanish is good for the development of your reading skills, so take some time to explore the Internet to find websites in Spanish that match your interests.
